At present the pressing and immediate interes connected with European affairs concenliates upon and around the movements of Garibaldi, the great Italian Filibuster, who recently sailed from Genoa with two thousand men and landed at, or near Marsala, on the West Coast of the Island of Sicily, his intention being to arouse and concentrate the elements of opposition to the Neapolitan Government, his small force being the nucleus, around which the revolted Sicilians are expected to gather.

This movement of Garabaldi can hardly have been made without the knowledge, consent, and approbation of the King of Sardinia and the Emperor of France, and is but another step in the direction of what has been so ardently proclaimed and advocated, to wit :- Italian unity and nationality under the rule of Victor Emanuel, said Victor Emanuel being virtually under the control of Louis Napoleon.

This is no doubt the true state of the case, but although Garibaldi is compelled to act under these auspices to promote the cause he has at heart, we may fairly faith of the French Emperor or the Italian King. He would perhaps have no indisposition to treat with England or any other power that could guarantee the nonintervention of Austria. Indeed, some of the French journals affect to believe that there is some design of placing Sicily under the protection of Great Britain, should its separation from the Kingdom of Naples be effected. They say that the efforts as well as the machisimilar to that held by the Ionians, "protection" meaning government-supremacy.

But it is evident that if the movement in Sicily be successful, it will extend to the continental possessions of the Neapolitan Monarchy, and the whole fabric of the Bourbon power in Italy be swept away. Will Austria remain quiet. Can she do so while witnessing movements that deprive her of all her allies at the South and increase the peril of her own remaining possessions in Italy. If Austria interferes, France will also do so, and we may then see the "beginning of the end."

Few can seriously be brought to believe that the short and inconclusive campaign of last year settled the difficulties or removed the threatening aspects of affairs in and alliance and commercial treaties between England and France mislead any person as to the real ticklish state of feeling existing in both countries in regard to the continued preservation of peace between them.

of the Italian boot-the most southerly of the large islands in the Mediterranean, fertile in soil, exceeding the State of Massachusetts in area and population by about fifty per cent., its importance to any great maratime power could hardly be overrated. To any other power it would be less valuable in a political point of view .--In the hands of Sardinia it would be virtually under the control of France, and facilitate the realization of the dream of French ambition, which is to make of the Mediterranean a "French Lake." It is, therefore, plain form adopted by the State Convention of North that English jealousy might be easily aroused.

The Pope; naturally enough, does not relish the cool appropriation of several of his Provinces by Victor Emanuel, and has not yet in any way given up the idea of the re-conquest of these provinces. Spain and Austria cannot see the head of their religion overwhelmed by the forces of Sardinia, and we may, therefore, look for their appearance on the scene, which will present the strange spectacle of a catholic monarch fighting to withhold from the Pope possessions which have belonged to the See of Rome before the family of Savoy had ever appeared on the south side of the Alps.

Upon the whole, there is every chance for a row somewhere or all around, and the biggest sort of a row at STRANGE.—The public meetings held in the State of South Carolina all seemed to approve the course of the delegates of that state in the Charleston Convention, all of whom withdrew, with two exceptions. Well, last Wednesday a new State Convention was called and met at Columbia and appointed delegates to the Richmond Convention, and strangely enough not a single member of the old delegation was re-appointed-not one; but Barnwell Rhett and other gentlemen of the extreme school of politicians were appointed in their stead. This resulted in a good deal of feeling. The test vote between the more moderate and the more extreme men was that between Mr. Rhett and Mr. Hayne, for the post of delegate at large, Mr. Rhett, ultra, having received 84 votes, and Mr. Hayne, moderate, 67 votes. Mr. Theo. D. Barker resigned his position as Chairman of the Democratic Central Committee. Mr. Gaillard, of Columbia, editor of the South Carolinian, one of the former delegates, withdrew his name. Dr. Wallace, a delegate, retired from the Convention.

The delegates from the State at large are Mr. Rhett, Mr. Garlington, Mr. Burt and Mr. Middleton. ## Discussion

Last evening, T. W. Brown, Jr., Esq., sub-elector of the Democratic party, and A. M. Waddell, Esq., sub elector of the Opposition party, met at the Court House Circumstances prevented our being present. We learn that Mr. Brown led off with a really strong argument upon the question of ad valorem, the understood ground for which the discussion took place, and that Mr. Waddell, in reply, met few or none of the arguments brought forward by Mr. Brown, but made a rallying ad captandum speech to the opposition, eulogising Bell and Everett, etc., etc.

A friend who was present has promised us a report, until the appearance of which we suspend comment, as both the gentlemen are respected personal friends.

These pig-eyed and suspicious orientals, among whon spying is a system and suspicion a rule, don't quite understand the fuss made over them. They think there must be something wrong or hidden about it, it is so different from what they have been used to at home. Perhaps they are half inclined to take it in earnest and believe that the "barbarians" of the United States are actually struck with admiration for the transcendent grandeur, beauty, talents, power and civilization of the Empire of Niphon. At any rate they are said to exhibit considerable indications of a tendency to get too big for their breeches, big and baggy as these last named garments are. The yellow men are quite put out-take it for granted that it is a scheme to detain their precious persons in the country, and so forth. They have been spoiled. Their self-conceit has been puffed up to an immense extent, and instead of feeling honored by the attentions of our authorities, they actually think that they confer the honor. They hardly know that they are merely shows-curiosities whose "run" is nearly over-they themselves nearly played out, and soon to give way to Heenan, the Prince of Wales or the Great Eastern. Let them rip.

The General Government is established and maintained for certain purposes-among these purposes is the protection of persons and the rights of persons in property, wherever or whenever such persons or property are beyoud the limits or the jurisdiction of a sovereign State, as for instance in the Territories or on the high seas.

It would be a discrimination, an intervention against such property, and it is idle to say that slave property is only entitled to the same kind and measure of protection that is given to any or all other descriptions of property. The statute books of all nations and people show that different kinds of property require different kinds of legislation for their protection. A dwelling house is a subject of arson, but a mill-pond is not. Such things will readily suggest themselves to any person taking the trouble to think

Neither the General Government, then, nor any other power has any right of interference or intervention with the institution of slavery in the Territories-it has no right to do anything for the introduction of that species Italy and Germany, nor can the mere talk of friendship of property—neither has it a right to do anything for its gist, says in the Richmond Dispatch that he is not dead Wheat firm but quiet. itself of the obligation. It has no power of destruction or unfriendly legislation, and can delegate no such power. It cannot delegate the right to destroy or impair. The only object of its institution was protection to constitutional rights.

The fourth resolution of the series passed by the Senate of the United States enunciates distinctly this principle. This resolution was incorporated into the plat-Carolina. There the Convention stopped, leaving for further legislative consideration to indicate the proper mode and manner in which the enjoyment of such right that " to admit the right and yet assert the power in a territorial government to prevent its enjoyment, is to deny that the Southern people are entitled to the protection of their common Federal Government."

We have from Hon. L'O. B. Branch, a copy of a letter addressed to his constitutents, upon the political topics of the day. We hardly know the precise position which Mr. Branch occupies, but from a cursory perusal of his letter we are inclined to the opinion that he favers the nomination of Mr. Douglas at Baltimore; not indeed that he says so, but he mixes non-intervention, which is sound doctrine, with " Squatter Sovereignty," which is unsound doctrine, in rather a strange way -at least rather strange to our dull apprehensions.

But we will give this letter a careful reading as is due to the gravity of the subjects discussed, and to the respect and friendship which we entertain for its author.

"DAILY ROUGH NOTES."-We are pleased to learn that Mr. Robinson has purchased the materials formerly used in publishing the Newbern Gazette, and will remove them at once to Goldsboro', where he will resume the publication of the " Daily Rough Notes."

We are happy to know that Mr. Robinson has thus made an arrangement by which the publication of the Rough Notes" will be under his own control, and placed beyond the reach of outside contingencies .--The "Notes," during the short time of their circulation secured an enviable credit, which will be increased your cause, in elevating you to the office of Governor the longer their issue is continued.

The Story of Chevy Chace. It was in the reign of Henry VI. of England, and of James of Scotland, that the hotheaded Percy, Earl of Northumberland, made a vow, and swore a great oath, that he would hunt for three good days among the Chevoit hills, in spite of his Scottish foe-the brave and mighty Earl Douglas-and all his clan. He declared that he would kill the fattest hares in all the forest and carry them away to feast upon in his grand castle. When the bold Douglas heard this he laughed in a grim, mocking way, and sent the Percy word to look Lord Percy came out of Bamboro' with a company of fif een hundred archers, and began the chase among the beautiful Cheviot hills, early on a Monday morning, in the golden autumn time. By noon they had killed a hundred fat deer. Then they lew a loud bugle-call and all came together to see the quar-

tering of the game. Then the proud Lord Percy said, "The doughty Douglas promised to meet us here, to-day; but I at 4 o'clock, A. M., on yesterday, did not arrive until knew full well the braggart Scot would fail to keep his Just then, one of his squires called his attention to a sight which quickly changed his opinion of the Scottish chief. Down below, in Teviotdale, along the borders of the I weed, came a host of full two thousand men, armed with bows and spears, bills and brands. As soon as they came near to the hunters they cried out, " Leave off quartering the deer, and look to your bows; for never, since you were was sally and promptly repaired, in time for the train born, have you had greater need of them than now.

The Douglass rose in front of his men, his white plume dancing in the wind, and his brazen armor flashing in the mid-day sun; and when he spoke his voice was like a trump et-so clear and strong and threatening. "Ho, there!" he cried, "what men, or whose men are you? And who gave you leave to hunt in Cheviot, in spite

Then Lord Percy, with a black frown, and a voice like thunder, answered: "We will not tell thee what men, nor whose men we are, but we will hunt here, in this chase, in spite of thee and all thy clan. We have killed the fattest harts in all these forests, and we intend to take them home and make merry with them.

"By my troth!" answered the Douglas, "for that boast ing speech, one or the other of us must die this day! But, my Lord Percy, it were a pity to kill all these guiltless men in our quarrel. We are both nobles of high degree, and well matched; so let our men stand aside while we two fight it

When it was told to the Scottish King James at Edinburgh that the noble Douglas had been slain at Cheviot, he cried ' Alas, woe is me ! for there is not, and never will be, such another captain in all Scotland.'

But when the word was carried to King Henry at London. that Lord Percy had been killed at Cheviot, he said, "May God have mercy on his soul! I have a hundred captains in England as good as ever he was; nevertheless, I pledge my life to avenge thy death, my gallant Percy!" To fulfil this angry vow he went to battle sgainst the Scot-tish King, and made the lives of six and thirty of his brav-est knights, and many hundred gentlemen and soldiers, pay for the life of the Percy. Soon the Scots avenged themselves; then the English; till t seemed that there would be no end of the fighting and and blood-shed and sorrow that came from that hunt in the Cheviot Hills ; most often called "Chevy Chace." For century after century, the decendants of the men who fought there were at deadly strife; and few I fear were as noble foes as the great Douglas and Lord Percy.

At last they forgot that the first cause of the quarrel was dispute about the right to kill a few deer, between chieftains who were reconciled in death and they went on hating, and robbing and killing one another; fighting, all the while, in the darkness of ignorance, and superstition, and fierce, wicked passions. But after awhile God sent a better day to England and Scotland-a day of knowledge and true religion; and by its light these men saw that they were brothers-flung down their swords, and clasped hands, and were

Didn't I have lots of lovers? I, Screpty Ann Green of Greentown, and never looked at any of them, because I loved you, Mr. Peacock? But, sez I, suppose I had married 'Squire Tim, and you'd married Susan Slasher, Susan would'nt have had my faults, of course she would'nt but she'd 'a had her own. And, sez I, Mr. Peacock, you would'nt have liked her faults any better than you like mine. I know Susan is a cut-and-dash sort of a woman; she'd 'a put the work through faster than I do, like enough; but would she have given her life away to your children as I do, Mr. Peacock? No, you know she tive Cathartic which the wouldn't. Has she got my elevated mind? No, you practice more than twerty know she hasn't,—and my state for literature? No, have long used the PILLS and the satisfaction which
